

Connecting Home and School

When parents are involved with children's education:

- Students have improved academic outcomes
- Children show improved social-emotional skills
- Teachers have tools to better support students
- Positive impacts cross race and socioeconomics

Getting started

- Let teacher know you're available for open and regularly shared communication
- Ask teacher for most effective way to share essential and timely communication
- Be open about your child's needs and offer to be a partner in supporting them
- Ask questions to clarify classroom expectations so you can support your child at home
- Assume that you all want the best for your child
- Share appreciation for the work teacher does to ensure effective learning experiences for your child.
